Students spend spring break in service

With spring break beginning, many students are looking to give back to the community during their free time. Alternative Spring Break (ASB) is dedicated to making the most of spring break by volunteering with local nonprofits.

“The ultimate goal of ASB is to provide students with an opportunity to have fun and give back to the community as an alternative to traditional spring break activities,” said Haley Barcus, marketing and public relations coordinator.

Barcus, a senior majoring in business marketing at Fresno State, said approximately 30 students will commit four days of their spring break to volunteering with two nonprofit organizations.

“There are two projects taking place,” said Barcus. “One at the Fresno Rescue Mission: Rescue the Children, and [one] with the Ronald McDonald House.”

At the Fresno Rescue Mission site, volunteers will paint and organize rooms and host activities with children. On the final day of activities, participants will also hold an Easter carnival for the children.

At the Ronald McDonald House, volunteers will interact with children while doing crafts, hosting movie nights, a game day and an Easter egg hunt. They will also help in restoration projects such as gardening, clean up and general repair.

The projects will take place April 14-17. This is in the ASB’s sixth year volunteering during spring break. Barcus said over the years, the number of ASB participants has grown.

“One of the challenges is trying to get the word out and make sure that students are aware ASB exists,” said Barcus. “This year, we focused a lot on promoting the program through tabling, social media, posters and word of mouth.”

The increased promotion has paid off, said Barcus. ASB received a large number of student applications.

The deadline for signing up for this year’s activities has passed, but for those interested in participating next year, Barcus said to keep an eye on the organization’s social media outlets. Find ASB on Facebook at www.facebook.com/fresnostateasb.

SIGMA CHI DONATES $25,000 TO CHILDREN’S HOSPITAL

By Nadia Pearl
@Nadia_Pearl

Fresno State’s Sigma Chi chapter donated $25,000 to Children’s Hospital Central California Tuesday after its annual fundraising event Derby Days.

“It’s something we can see first hand how much of a help and contribution it is to give here in the local community itself,” said Jared Berston, a Sigma Chi member.

“Sigma Chi’s been at Fresno State and active since 1922 now, so we do have a rich history within the university but also within the community,” Berston said.

With such a history, Berston said contributions from alumni are a big factor in their fundraising success.

“One of the biggest ways we donate and raise the philanthropy for the Valley’s children is that we rely a lot on our local alumni with-in the fraternity and that went to Fresno State,” Berston said.

Receiving donations ranging from $50 up to $1,000, Berston said this was the main way to generate funds.

As well as reaching out to alumni, money is raised through Derby Days, an event that features both fraternities and sororities coming together in various competitions.

“While at the same time we’re having fun, we’re also raising money for a great cause,” Berston said.

The fraternity’s philanthropy efforts this year means Sigma Chi has now reached the $100,000 mark in their donations to the hospital. Last year they donated $16,000.

“When you look at $16,000 to $25,000 in just a year, that speaks volumes,” Berston said.
Redbox on campus?
Yes, please.

Why there would be benefits to having a Redbox station at Fresno State

It’s Friday night and you’re sitting in your dorm room or what have you, and you want to watch a movie. Problem is you already scoured through the Netflix database, and there’s nothing you haven’t seen or feel like watching.

Should you take a trip to the actual theaters? No, you just spent most of your money when you (most likely) went out with friends the previous night.

There’s one option that could easily resolve this problem…hello Redbox! How beneficial would it be to have multiple Redboxes on campus?

For those who don’t know what Redbox is, it is an automated kiosk that allows DVD, Blu-ray Discs and videogame rental for $1.20. These nifty little things are based in local grocery stores, pharmacies and mass retailers around Fresno and are rising in popularity across America ever since the closure of Blockbuster.

Granted, there is usually a line around the people generally feel like watching a movie, but they don’t take long. Unless, of course, there is an indecisive person (I’m not naming names) trying to figure which movies the whole group would enjoy.

However, if there were some Redboxes on campus, it would not only be popular amongst the student crowd, it could increase traffic in the University Student Union main floor and other parts of campus that could increase student participation.

I personally don’t live in a dorm, but like the other students who live in the surrounding areas, it would be convenient to just be a stone’s throw away from a fun night in watching the new “Captain America” movie. Now, I’m just a student suggesting a pretty awesome idea that could possibly happen, so I’m not 100 percent sure the logistics would be for this to be executed, but I am 100 percent sure on the potentiality.

Redbox can even benefit those whose class was “canceled,” and they’re just waiting around for a few hours until their next one. Students can just head over, wait in the ever growing line, rent a Robert Downey Jr. movie (because those are always enjoyable), and pop it in their laptop.

For those who don’t want to sleep or go out with friends, it is an automated kiosk that allows TV shows to be rented.

Eight TV shows you need to binge watch

1. House of Cards: Netflix’s Golden Globe-nominated show is award worthy for a reason. You may have heard of veteran actor Kevin Spacey, but maybe you’re not sure what the fuss is all about when it comes to his monologues. Get your couch ready for a marathon of Frank Underwood’s epic rants.

2. Orange is the New Black: Want to see another Netflix hit? This comedy-drama show is based on a true story of a middle-aged white woman whose experiences in a men’s prison being laughable and sympathetic. Also, the cast of400+ acting characters will capture your attention right away.

3. American Horror Story: Okay, depending on which season you’re watching, you might want to take a break in between to get a breather from this sometimes outrageous and creepy show. To get ready for the highly anticipated “AWW, Freak Show,” catch up on the previous installments featuring Emma Roberts and Jessica Lange.

4. The Walking Dead: It’s been too long with papers and studying for midterms to check out the post-nuclear apocalypse show, now is the time. The drama and horror series from AMC continues to grow its fan base for a lot of reasons. Whether it’s fan girls falling in love with character Daryl Dixon or the moral struggles the characters face while trying to survive, the show has a little something for everyone to like.

5. Game of Thrones: Ever heard your classmates whisper about the Stark’s or dragons in class and you were confused for the rest of the day? Well, get your pillow ready because it sounds like you need to catch up on the HBO series that has just been renewed for two more seasons. That is of course if imaginary dramas are your thing. Did I mention there are dragons?

6. Parks and Recreation: Who doesn’t want to laugh and live vicariously through Amy Poehler? That should be enough description if I just mention Amy-freakin’-Poehler, right? Plus a cast of hilarious and talented actors from Rashida Jones to Amy Poehler, check out the show that has filled a cool in our hearts since The Office ended.

7. Pretty Little Liars: Who is “A”? This question will keep you moving through the сезоны of PLL, a teen favorite among young adults near and far. Plus, you will fall in love with at least one of the girls on the show; just don’t get too attached to the couplings on as there are many plot twists.

8. How I Met Your Mother: The nine-seasons-long comedy just recently finished, and although there were mixed reactions about the finale, the show’s long run was worth it. More than the reveal of who the mother is, the budding relationships, hijinks, and unfortunate situations make the show and its characters enjoyable for you to want to be a part of the gang.

Fresno State’s Craig School of Business is one of 85 colleges and universities worldwide to extend its business and accounting accreditation by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB International). AACSB looks at the quality of 11,000 colleges and universities worldwide. Fewer than 600 of the 11,000 or 5 percent of colleges and universities have received AACSB International accreditation.

Fresno State has held AACSB International accreditation since 1958, the first California State University campus to receive certification and was the third university in California, behind UCLA and UC Berkeley.

“We have long been proud of the education and experiences our students get within our programs,” said Dr. Robert Harper, dean of the Craig School of Business. “This accreditation helps us demonstrate that the Craig School of Business is among the best of the best worldwide.”

Harper said schools that receive accreditation are reviewed every five years. The Craig School of Business was evaluated by the AACSB in January and received confirmation on March 28 via email that the school’s accreditation would be extended for another five years.

“I’m proud to have it extended and confirmed for us,” Harper said. “[It confirms] that we are continuing to improve because continuous improvement is one of the goals of AACSB. We are offering our students quality programs that will help them succeed in their career.”

Harper said the faculty is pleased to know that the college has been able to extend its certification because it means that the school has high-quality business programs and the staff does not have to worry about the college being re-evaluated next year.

Harper said the AACSB accreditation is a stamp of approval. It means it met the standards worldwide of all business programs, in particular the U.S., including some of the more prestigious ones.

“We offer a nice quality program, said Harper. “We worked hard to achieve recognition attributed to students and how they work.”

“We take pride in outside and engaged activities,” said Harper. “We offer opportunities for internships, studying abroad, service learning, and projects with real companies, the whole gamut of external experiences to go along with classrooms.”

The school receives a large amount of community support from businesses and business professionals, Harper said.

“It takes a great deal of commitment and determination to earn AACSB accreditation,” said Robert D. Reid, executive vice president and chief accreditation officer of AACSB International.

“The school must not only meet specific standards of excellence, but their deans, faculty and professional staff must make a commitment to ongoing continuous improvement to ensure that the institution will continue to deliver the highest quality of education to students.”

Creative Community Grows in Downtown

By Ryan Bricco
Special to The Collegian

IdeaWorks is a collaborative workshop space located in Downtown Fresno where locals gather to share ideas, collaborate and teach each other skills as woodworking and application programming.

Byron Russell is a film and animation professor at Fresno City College who spends most of his free time at Fresno IdeaWorks working on any number of physical projects with other people from around the Central Valley who are interested in creating similar projects.

"We refer to ourselves as a 'hackerspace," said Gary Johnson, one of the IdeaWorks founders. "But often people have to explain that the term just means we're a group interested in seeing the vision come to life or learning and sharing ideas."

Russell said he's excited for the San Mateo, but his goal is to finish the "Heptagon" in time for Fresno's first Mini Maker Faire at the Fresno Art Museum on Saturday so the Fresno community can see the potential of IdeaWorks.

Johnson said that Russell's piece was recently accepted into the Maker Faire, "the greatest show-and-tell on earth," in San Mateo, Calif.

"It's exciting for us because this is a great way to draw attention to what we're doing," Johnson said. "Artists and hobbyists from all over the state will get together to share what they're making and talk about the process. It's a time of learning and sharing ideas."

Russell said he's excited for the San Mateo, but his goal is to finish the "Heptagon" in time for Fresno's first Mini Maker Faire at the Fresno Art Museum on Saturday so the Fresno community can see the potential of IdeaWorks.

"I can't guarantee I'll have it fully completed, but I'll have something out there," he said.

The IdeaWorks shop is open for members almost every afternoon and evening, but it specifically invites community members and students Downtown every Wednesday night from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. for its "open shop nights."

"It's just a chance for people to learn more, meet each other and hang out with no pressure or expectations," Kramer said. "We're always trying to get people, especially students, interested in learning new skills, building friendships and making stuff."

Freshman All-America team after a productive first year as a Bulldog.

Watson led all Mountain West freshmen with 4.6 rebounds per game (rpg) and was second in scoring (8.6 points per game (ppg)) and blocked shots (12). He was the third freshman in Fresno State history to be awarded the honor alongside Mike Mitchell (1985-86) and Greg Smith (2009-10).

Overall, Watson averaged 10 ppg and 4.4 rpg and shot 44.4 percent from the field. He started in all 39 games and played 29.1 minutes per game.

On Feb. 22, Watson scored a season-high 20 points in the ‘Dogs’ 79-76 win at Utah State.

Baseball: Borst named Mountain West Co-Pitcher of the Week

Fresno State sophomore pitcher Tim Borst was named the Mountain West baseball Co-Pitcher of the Week for games played from March 31 to April 6, sharing the honor with UNLV’s Bryan Bonnell.

Last Saturday, Borst pitched a complete-game shutout, allowing only five hits, in the ‘Dogs’ 2-0 victory over UNLV at Pete Beiden Field. He had four strikeouts and no walks in the contest.

All five hits allowed in that game were singles, and he did not allow any hits from the third till the seventh innings.

Bonnell also pitched a complete-game shutout the night after, when UNLV averted its loss to the Bulldogs with a 7-0 beating. Just like Borst, Bonnell allowed five hits in the contest, struck out four, but walked one batter.

This season, Borst has a 2-1 record with a 2.83 ERA. He won the sole Pitcher of the Week honors for games played from Feb. 24 to March 2.

LACROSSE SENIOR DAY

Fresno State beats Saint Mary’s to finish home season

By Christopher Livingston @senorlivingston

On Senior Day at Bulldog Stadium, the Fresno State lacrosse team won its first home game of the 2014 season.

Senior Kara Concheck and sophomore Anjelica Fuccillo scored four goals each, and junior Marcy Levatino added three in the Bulldogs’ 16-12 victory over the Saint Mary’s Gaels Thursday night.

The win also gives the ‘Dogs their first conference win of the year.

The Gaels scored the first goal of the game when Jaclyn Biggers zipped the ball past Fresno State goalie Lisa Barnaba. Concheck’s first score of the contest tied the game at 1. Junior midfielder Holly Cisneros made the go-ahead goal before the Gaels tied the match.

Back-and-forth play followed until the ‘Dogs scored three straight goals by Allison Poust, Levatino and Fuccillo to pull them ahead 8-4.

The Gaels had the last laugh of the half after Biggers and Krista Morgan scored to cut Fresno State’s lead to 2.

The Bulldogs began the second half on a hot streak as they scored three straight goals to get into the double digits. The Gaels cut into the lead with two scores, but the ‘Dogs recovered and kept Saint Mary’s from getting control of the game.

The Bulldogs have now closed out their home season and will spend the remaining four games on the road, beginning April 15 at California.

Football: Mountain West announces Friday TV schedule

The Mountain West Conference released a slate of 11 Friday-night football games that will be telecast on the CBS Sports and ESPN networks, three of which will feature the Fresno State football team.

On Sept. 26, the Bulldogs will head to University Stadium in Albuquerque, N.M., where they will face the New Mexico Lobos on either ESPN or ESPN2.

The Bulldogs’ home game against San Diego State was moved to Oct. 3 and will be televised on the CBS Sports Network. Kickoff is scheduled for 7 p.m.

The Gaels scored the first goal of the game when Jaclyn Biggers zipped the ball past Fresno State goalie Lisa Barnaba.

Concheck’s first score of the contest tied the game at 1. Junior midfielder Holly Cisneros made the go-ahead goal before the Gaels tied the match.
